From Freedom's Editorial Board

Facing up to the reality of Britain's biased media

A TTHE HEIGHT of last month's General Election campaign, a search of Google News for media reports published in the past 24 hours on the British National Party brought up 20 pages of stories all but a handful were attacking the BNP.

A similar search on the website of The Times, once Britain's newspaper of record, revealed a full page of anti-BNP reports, the majority by Fiona Hamilton, and not one article that mentioned the Party in an uncritical light.

Since the BNP's electoral breakthrough in 2002, and our continued progress over the past eight years, the media has had a field day attacking the British National Party. During this time, however, there was always a handful of journalists who would treat the BNP fairly and report on our activities in an unbiased fashion which gave us hope that one day their colleagues in the media might follow suit.

But now we must face the reality that this is not going to happen. Those few intrepid journalists who reported on the British National Party without the usual smears have been silenced by the NUJ and anti-BNP bullyboys so now, apart from in a handful of local newspapers, there is no unbiased reporting on the BNP.

There was an interesting example of the bullyboys at work when the Brentwood Gazette published an uncritical report on a British National Party election meeting.

The newspaper was bombarded with threats and attacked in other media outlets. The editor was forced to apologise, take down the report from the newspaper's website, and reprimand the journalist

ATTRACTING ATTENTION: Nick Griffin polled the BNP's best vote - 6,620 (14.6%) in Barking in East London.

Our verdict on Thursday 6th May

"We might have got a bloody nose in the local elections, but in the General Election we made significant progress from our 2005 effort."

Nick Griffin, BNP Chairman.

FOR THE first time since 2002 the British National Party had a setback in the local council elections.

For the past eight years the BNP has made steady progress, increasing its number of seats and breaking into new areas. As well as winning in council elections, the Party also won in the London Assembly elections and the European Elections, so 2010 is the first time we have been left empty-handed.

Despite the disappointment that the British National Party didn't make the breakthrough in our high made inroads into the core vote of the Old Gang parties which has been established for many years. In Wales we not only managed to save our deposits in some seats but also mounted a challenge to Plaid Cymru for the nationalist core vote.

Anti-BNP proponents of electoral reform say that a 5% threshold plus an additional 2.5% safeguard for good measure, would keep the BNP out of Westminster but they would be wrong if our votes in the constituencies below were replicated across the country.

Our General Election results were very much like those in the European Elections of 2004. We failed to win a seat so were written off by the political pundits, but on closer analysis our results deserve much more than to be dismissed out of hand.

In nearly 200 seats our votes were around the 4% mark and we were firmly established as the fourth political party. This is something to build on and shows that we have a presence across the country.

This makes it crystal clear that there's no chance of a quiet life for any editor who tries to report fairly on the British National Party, which means that there's no point in the British National Party being fair with the media.

From now on we shall treat the media with the same contempt they reserve for us. We have closed down all our Press Office telephone lines and now the media's only access to us is via a ticketing system on the BNP website. To take a ticket they have to provide authorisation of who they are and full details of the story they are reporting on to the media filtering unit.

If it sounds like a smear story then the ticket is closed without response. If it's a valid enquiry then one of our spokesmen will contact them.

From now on we deal only with journalists who treat us fairly. There is no access to the Party or our spokesmen from journalists who are pursuing a blatant anti-BNP agenda.

Despite the disappointment that the British National Party didn't make the breakthrough in our high profile seats in Barking and Stoke Central, our votes across the country in many of the 336 seats contested were testament to a solid bedrock of support, and firmly established the BNP as Britain's fourth political party.

The average vote per constituency for the British National Party was 1673, for UKIP it was 1665 and for the Green Party just 918.

As well as saving 72 deposits we beat UKIP in 170 seats and lost to them in 118, we beat the Greens in 118 while losing to them in 31.

In the North East, Yorkshire and the East Midlands our candidates made inroads into the core vote of the Old Gang parties which has been established for many years. BARKING: GLA member Richard Barnbrook, together with Barking and Dagenham candidates Nick Griffin and Michael Barnbrook, in front of one of the BNP's eye-catching election billboards.

When people digest our results in full they will see that this was a very respectable performance.

British National Party chairman Nick Griffin told an election debriefing meeting in Leicester than the Party has leaned valuable lessons from the elections. He explained:

"When I was boxing at Cambridge I learnt much more from a contest where I was beaten than where I had won. It's the same for the BNP. We now understand that fighting elections 'the old way' won't work for us any more. We have to adopt the same electioneering tactics that the Labour Party used so effectively to stave off their election wipe-out." With elections for the Welsh and Scottish Assemblies being held next year under a proportional voting system, the British National party will be pulling out all the stops to get back on the winning trail again.

BNP now bigger than UKIP

BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY: Britain's fastest growing political organisation.

THE MEMBERSHIP of the British National Party has exceeded the 14,000 mark for the first time in the Party's history.

As of the end of May 2010, the British National Party has over 14,000 members, an increase of 3,724 since April 2009.

It's an impressive figure, especially considering that the largest formal lapsing of non-renewing members (i.e. those with a December expiry date) has already taken place.

There were 3,514 members due to renew in December 2009 and of these, 2,915 did just that - an impressive 83% renewal rate!

Helping cope with the increased size of the Party is the new 'super' integrated membership system which works 'hand in hand' with the fundraising and Trafalgar Club databases. It is much more the BNP has operated in the past and has totally revolutionised the central database system.

In the four weeks of the General Election campaign our Head Office received over 10,000 requests for information packs about the British National Party.

Some 6,000 of these enquiries have already been processed, added into the database and sent the information requested. The remainder are still being added into the database.

The BNP's call centre has already contacted 3,500 of these 'leads' and 876 have been converted into members.

Over the past 12 months 565 five-year loyalty badges have also been issued - an indication that the British National Party's membership has stability as well

Police investigate 64 cases of electoral fraud

ELECTION FRAUD by the Labour Party has forced one of its newly-elected councillors for the Goresbrook Ward in Barking to resign.

The ward previously held by British National Party GLA member Richard Barnbrook, was contested by the high profile trade unionist Labour candidate Louise Couling, while she was still a council employee. Such open party allegiance is forbidden under council rules.

Couling's employment record was uncovered as part of an ongoing investigation election fraud in Barking being conducted by the former leader of the BNP opposition on the council, Richard Barnbrook.

"We informed the Labour Party that we would be going to court on this matter," Mr Barnbrook said.

"Faced with this legal threat, the Labour councillor threw in the towel and resigned."

A by-election will be held shortly and Barking & Dagenham British National Party will be holding a selection meeting to decide their candidate but Richard Barnbrook warns that the Party has a mountain to climb after Labour's resounding victory on May 6th.

"We have to be realistic about this election," he told a planning meeting of local activists.

"We know what happened here and the reasons why it happened and will try to address our campaign as such.

There are currently more than 64 cases of electoral fraud under investigation in Barking, mostly consisting of multiple voter registrations at identical residences.

Three year witch-hunt of BNP teacher ends in failure

The disciplinary panel said that the criticism of terrorists and immigration expressed by Mr Walker, after the beheading of British hostage Kenneth Bigley and the murder of Sharon Beshenivsky, did not suggest intolerance.

The comments had been posted by the former soldier on a forum of Teesside Online under the pseudonym Corporal Fox.

Delivering the panel's verdict, its chairman, Angela Stones, said:

"The committee does not accept that references to 'immigrants' are of themselves suggestive of any particular views on race.

"A negative comment about immigration to the UK of itself need not be indicative of racial intolerance."

Mr Walker's trade union representative, Patrick Harrington of Solidarity - the Union for British Workers, told the panel that the exteacher did not accept his postings were racist and that he had not talked about his political views to pupils or staff.

BNP leader Nick Griffin, told journalists waiting outside the hearing that Mr Walker had been persecuted for his political beliefs and was delighted the charges had been thrown out.

"The committee has upheld the right of Adam Walker and every other teacher in the country to criticise Government policy."

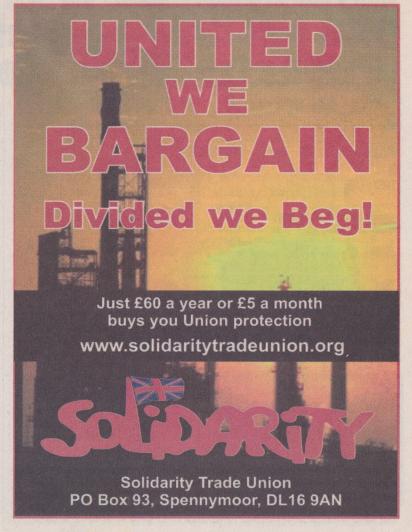

Following its successful defence of the teacher, the Solidarity Trade Union issued a warning to employers who persecute employees because of their political beliefs.

"The right not to be persecuted for your beliefs, as apart from professional actions, was at the cornerstone of trade unions in the early part of the 20th century.

"Unfortunately the leadership of many trade unions have become absorbed into the establishment and will only protect those whose views coincide with their own.

"We at Solidarity will protect our members on a point of principle regardless of any party political differences we may have outside the workplace.

"We caution any employer or public body that seeks to infringe those rights. Go down that road and you will have a fight on your hands."

The British Nation is a family of families

THE British National Party's Policy Department explains the core values and central theme behind the BNP's General Election Manifesto.

WE are British Nationalists, which means that the British Nation is the centre of our attention.

We reject the baseless but repeated assertion that the British Nation is a heterogeneous collection of disparate peoples. Between two-thirds and three quarters of the ancestors of the indigenous population were the paeleolithic people who settled in Britain following the retreat of the last Ice Age. All subsequent immigration of closely related Celts, Anglo-Saxons, Danes, Norsemen, Normans and French contributed less than a third of the ancestry of indigenous Britons.

We believe that cultures are the product of distinctive peoples and not that peoples are the product of the cultures to which they are exposed.

We recognise that a change in the population of a country will inevitably change its culture: its values, its beliefs, its behaviour and that is why we oppose immigration.

ECONOMY: Our people should not be exploited as expendable factors of production.

Whilst citizenship can be acquired by legal process, nationality is conferred by descent. The British people have been confused by legislators who have studiously confused the two concepts. Only British Nationalists understand the difference between those who are civically British (i.e. have British citizenship) and those who are ethnically British (are descended from the indigenous population).

We define ourselves as Ethno-Nationalists as distinct from Civic Nationalists. We recognise the difference between those who form the indigenous population and those who do not. Furthermore, we believe that the interests of the indigenous population must be given priority in our country.

Our approach to the indigenous population is a family approach. We recognise the Nation as a family of families. It has been estimated that the British are on average thirtieth cousins to apparently unrelated fellow nationals. This means that we owe that population a duty that is not simply a legal duty; it is a duty of kinship. Furthermore, we expect a similar commitment from that population to the nation state, which is their instrument.

This approach will have implications for our policy towards the poor, the unemployed and the sick, that should differ from that of mainstream 'right-wing' parties. We do not see our fellow nationals as expendable factors of production that can be dispensed with by the state and employers. We see the economy as an instrument to serve our people and not an institution that the Nation should serve.

Whilst citizenship can be acquired by legal process, nationality is conferred by descent. The British people have been confused by legislators who have studiously confused the two concepts. Only British Nationalists understand the difference between those who are civically British (i.e. have British citizenship) and those who are ethnically British (are descended from the indigenous population).

We define ourselves as Ethno-Nationalists as distinct from Civic Nationalists. We recognise the difference between those who form the indigenous population and those who do not. Furthermore, we believe that the interests of the indigenous population must be given priority in our country.

Our approach to the indigenous population is a family approach. We recognise the Nation as a family of families. It has been estimated that the British are on average thirtieth cousins to apparently unrelated fellow nationals. This means that we owe that population a duty that is not simply a legal duty; it is a duty of kinship. Furthermore, we expect a similar commitment from that population to the nation state, which is their instrument.

This approach will have implications for our policy towards the poor, the unemployed and the sick, that should differ from that of mainstream 'right-wing' parties. We do not see our fellow nationals as expendable factors of production that can be dispensed with by the state and employers. We see the economy as an instrument to serve our people and not an institution that the Nation should serve.

Enter Jim Dowson and his Midas Business Consultancy.

Now the BNP has at its disposal five fully equipped, staffed and paid-for offices which include a distribution centre, a call centre and an accounts office.

Today the party has a substantial and stable fundraising income, a rapidly growing membership, and despite having fought two of the largest national election campaigns in the Party's history, has remained relatively debt free.

That's because the Midas Consultancy has raised millions of pounds, revamped our training programme, design department, media/communications department, administration, staff organisation, events management, IT department and reduced our costs by hundreds of thousands of pounds by using their procurement techniques.

It's an impressive record - the Labour Party might have Barack Obama's consultants 'Blue State Digital' but we have, in the hardworking team at Midas, a pool of homegrown British talent who have certainly given Blue State Digital a run for their money.

Deposit saved despite wrong leaflet delivery

BRITISH National Party candidate Clive Bennett, saved his deposit in Swansea East despite the best efforts of the Royal Mail

His election address was provided to Royal Mail early on in the campaign and before long reports came in from the constituency that they had begun to be delivered.

CLIVE BENNETT: First no leaflets and then the wrong leaflet.

However, reports also came in during and towards the end of the election period from areas within the constituency which hadn't received any British National Party leaflets at all.

When Clive complained to Royal Mail, he was told they would be delivered the next day, but they weren't.

Then 24 hours before the election, voters in Swansea East reported that BNP election addresses for Swansea West were now being delivered.

The Royal Mail admitted their mistake but claimed to have delivered the correct leaflet the next day . . . which was, of course, polling day.

Welsh Assembly Election 2011 The challenge facing the British National Party

by Brian Mahoney

THE election for the Welsh Assembly comprises of 40 seats based on the first past the post constituencies, in other words the same as the General Election, and another 20 regional seats based on the d'Hondt formula of proportional representation and for this purpose, Wales is divided into five regions, each with 4 regional seats.

The turnout for the Welsh Assembly election of 2007 in the regions was between 41% and 50%, compared with around 30% for the European Election and 64% for the General Election.

The high turnout at last month's General Election did hurt us. We only managed to save one deposit - Swansea East (5.2%) - although we had some near misses in Torfaen (4.4%), Caerphilly (4.2%) and Aberavon (4.1%).

This was disappointing as we were expecting to save more, however it can be seen we suffered because of the percentage 'squeeze' caused by the increase in turnout. The turnout was double that at the European Elections and although our vote numbers held up solidly everywhere, our percentage of the increased

BNP regional votes in the 2007 Assembly election are higher than we have been able to measure since 2009. We don't know where they came from, or if they will reappear.

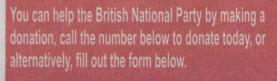

South Wales East would seem to be our best chance, but we need every extra vote we can find. In South Wales West we need to look at gaining 3,000 extra votes by next June.

North Wales is less clear given the uncertainty of Tory gains and Plaid Cymru losses and how this will affect the d'Hondt formula, but

This was disappointing as we were expecting to save more, however it can be seen we suffered because of the percentage 'squeeze' caused by the increase in turnout. The turnout was double that at the European Elections and although our vote numbers held up solidly everywhere, our percentage of the increased turnout thus suffered accordingly, roughly halved from what might have been hoped for.

To try to obtain an idea of the likely BNP vote in the Welsh Assembly regional seats based on the regional performance in this General Election, I make the assumption that there is a solid vote present from the European Election in those constituencies where we didn't stand. Also, allowing for less of a squeeze factor, I include a general 12% increase in the number of BNP votes between now and next June (based on our national progress). Crystal Ball gazing I know, but we have to put a stake somewhere.

So in summary, it looks likely that each region will need to find another 3,000 new votes (roughly 428 per constituency) if we are to win our first Welsh Assembly seat.

The BNP has also launched a new Communications & Publicity Dept that encompasses media/communications, the BNP website, publicity and design, all for the first time under one roof and coordinated by National Communications Officer Paul Golding. The new department, designed and researched by Paul and Midas Consultantcy, has already put in place some impressive new systems - such as a media enquiries ticketing system, a Public Relations operating system with instant access to 1.4 million journalists worldwide - and plans an ambitious re-organisation of our publicity machine.

A VIEW FROM INSIDE THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT with Andrew Brons

I'm afraid I owe the High Representative an apology!

HAVE always tried to keep a channel of red, white and blue water between ourselves and those who make up the leadership of the Establishment Safety Valve Party (otherwise known as UKIP).

The media might delight in publicising the infantile antics of these people in the European Parliament but their behaviour achieves nothing and only brings the campaign of opposition to the European Union into disrepute.

In contrast, we like to make serious political points about the actions of the Eurocrats and the positions that they hold. Recently, I asked Baroness Ashton, the EU's High Representative (or Foreign Minister) whether she could act according to a mandate from the Council (which for all its faults at least contains representatives of member states), when she was also a Vice President of the (unelected and unaccountable) Commission, had her office in the Commission building and relied on advice from Commission staff.

Article 18 of the Lisbon Treaty articulates the myth that she and her successors will be mandated by the Council.

A letter to the 'Telegraph'

NDREW Brons has taken the Daily Telegraph to task after it reported on his attendance at the 11th EU-Croatia Joint Parliamentary Committee Meeting held in Zagreb, the capital of Croatia.

He wrote to the editor of the newspaper:

"You reported on 29th May that I had enjoyed being a member of a delegation to Zagreb, despite being an opponent of EU membership.

ZAGREB: Andrew warned Croatian MPs.

"My intention of joining the delegation was to use the opportunity to warn Croats against joining the European Union.

"Croatia lost many of its soldiers and civilians to secure its independence less than twenty years ago. Now it is preparing to give away that independence to the European Union without a shot being fired.

"I spoke at nearly all of the meetings warning Croatian MPs and ministers against joining the EU and expressing the hope that its promised referendum would be conducted with fairness."

A VIEW FROM INSIDE THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT with Andrew Brons

I'm afraid I owe the High Representative an apology!

HAVE always tried to keep a channel of red, white and blue water between ourselves and those who make up the leadership of the Establishment Safety Valve Party (otherwise known as UKIP).

The media might delight in publicising the infantile antics of these people in the European Parliament but their behaviour achieves nothing and only brings the campaign of opposition to the European Union into disrepute.

In contrast, we like to make serious political points about the actions of the Eurocrats and the positions that they hold. Article 18 of the Lisbon Treaty articulates the myth that she and her successors will be mandated by the Council.

On another occasion I asked the Commissioner for Inter-Institutional Relations, Mr. Sefkovics, whether it was right for Mr. Rompuy, the President of the European Council, to refuse to submit himself to questioning in the Parliament, simply because he was not elected or removable by it.

However, in my last article in Freedom, I did unintentionally insult Baroness Ashton. I referred to her position as High Commissioner instead of High Representative.

As readers will know, a high commissioner is the equivalent of an ambassador, a representative of the United Kingdom to another country. The difference is that a high commissioner is a representative of the United Kingdom to a Commonwealth country, whereas an ambassador is a representative of the United Kingdom to a country that is not in the Commonwealth.

A High Representative can delude himself or herself into thinking that she is speaking and acting on behalf of 500 million people in the European Union to the whole world or even beyond. A High Commissioner speaks and acts only on behalf of the Government of sixty million people.

To demote Baroness Ashton (right) in this way might be seen as an act of lese majeste that

Question submitted on behalf of the NUM

THE National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) and Communications Workers' Union (CWU) wrote to Andrew Brons asking him to raise the issue the victimisation of trade unionists in Columbia at the European Parliament.

He did just that, submitting a Written Question on the subject.

Andrew asked the Commission whether or not it has evidence that the allegations made by the unions are correct and, if it does, whether or not it is prepared to suspend this trade agreement.

Both Baroness Ashton, and José Manuel Barroso, the President of the European Commission, replied - claiming that the trade agreement benefited workers in Columbia rather than oppressing them.

AST month at the European Parliament in Strasbourg, Andrew Brons not only addressed the MEPs but also the European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso.

During his three minute speech on the Commission's Programme for 2010, Andrew Brons told the Parliament and President:

"The Commission's document refers to the alleged need to develop further legal immigration policies to alleviate the perils of demographic ageing.

"The idea that we can import large families from the Third World as a substitute for unborn European children is based on a particularly pernicious and wrongheaded assumption: that we are the products of nurture and that Third World cultures are like overcoats that can be taken off at the port of entry and replaced with a European cultural overcoat that can be issued with their residence and citizenship papers.

"Distinctive cultures are made by distinctive peoples and not the another way around. We are not the products of our cultures. Our cultures are the products of our peoples.

(My incarceration there being the first step towards that estimable country becoming a member of the Club) Only time will tell.

*Jerzy Busek, is President of the European Parliament, who must not be confused with Mr. Barroso, who is Present of the Commission, who must not be confused with Mr. Rompuy, who is President of the European Council, who must not be confused with the Rotating Spanish Presidency, Mr. Zapatero, who is President of the Council (of the European Union). PRIDE of place in the North East went to Andy Swaddle in Jarrow whose 2.709 votes and 7.0% was the best result in the region.

The British National Party was the easy winner in the battle of the smaller parties, beating UKIP in 20 seats while losing out to the Establishment's Safety Valve Party in only four seats.

The BNP also comfortably dealt with the challenge from the Green Party in the North East, defeating them 6-0 in the seats both parties contested.

Ten deposits were saved from the 30 seats contested and BNP candidates missed out by less than 1% from getting their £500 back in another nine constituencies.

There were some eye-catching performances, most notably from Ken Booth and his 2,302 votes (6.7%) in Newcastle Central and Donna Watson with her 2382 votes (6.5%) in South Shields.

Another very good vote on a satisfactory election night for the Party in the region was received by Cheryl Dunn who polled 2317 votes (6.6%) in Easington, exactly double the BNP vote back in 2005.

WHERE WE STAND

'Bobbies on the Beat'. Much tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of capital punishment for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drugdealers and violent thugs.

MMIGRATION: An end to immigration and bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the £billions wasted in foreign aid to fund 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the wasted on funding our membership of the European Union for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union to restore Britain's freedom. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside. A ban on greenfield house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops, and the restoration of our 200 mile fishing limit.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last policy. Like all the other democratic political parties, the British National Party includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of Labour, the Tories and the Lib-Dems. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Yorkshire Round-Up 20 saved deposits and victory over UKIP in 27 seats

PRIDE of place in Yorkshire goes to Marlene Guest in Rotherham whose 3,906 votes and 10.4% was the best result in the region.

The British National Party was the easy winner in the battle of the smaller parties, beating UKIP in 27 seats while losing out to the Establishment's Safety Valve Party in 11 seats. The BNP also comfortably saw off the challenge of the Green Party, defeating them 16-1 in the seats both parties contested.

Twenty deposits were saved from the 47 seats fought and 13 BNP candidates actually managed to gain more than a 7% share of the vote.

There were a significant number of very good performances, and of special note were those by Ian Sutton and Colin Porter in Barnsley Central and Barnsley East who both polled over 3,000 votes and collected an 8.9% and 8.6% vote share.

Another very good vote on election night was received by Kevin Meeson who polled 3,066 votes (8.2%) in Leeds Central which was double the BNP vote share back in 2005.

Eastern Round-Up 10 votes over 4% and beating the Greens in 22 seats t was a disappointing General Election night for the British National Party in the Eastern Region.

Even the 'Pride of Place' result - Emma Colgate in Thurrock - was well below expectations as a very strong showing by UKIP put a ceiling on the BNP vote. Just two deposits were saved although in another eight seats our candidates managed to poll over 4%. The British National Party did achieve a comprehensive victory over a competitive slate of Green Party candidates defeating them 22-3 in the seats both parties contested. If a form of proportional representation is brought in by the new Coalition Government then the East of England is certainly a region where the British National Party and UKIP need to talk to each other to ensure that they can maximise their votes by not contesting the same seats.

London Round-Up The BNP's 2 best results and victory over UKIP in 19 seats

PRIDE of place in the London region went, of course, to Nick Griffin in Barking for his 6,620 votes and 14.6% was the best result in the capital and the country.

The British National Party was the winner in the battle of the smaller parties, beating UKIP in 19 seats while losing out to the Establishment's Safety Valve Party in nine constituencies.

The BNP also beat the Green Party 23-9 in the seats both parties contested.

Five deposits were saved from the 33 seats contested and BNP candidates missed out by less then 1% from getting their £500 back in another three seats.

The country's second best BNP vote also came in London with Michael Barnbrook gaining an impressive 4,952 votes (11.2%) in Dagenham and Rainham. It was an improvement on five years ago when the British National Party vote was 2,870.

A result worthy of note was William Whelpley's 3,421 votes (6.4%) in Hornchurch and Upminster.

Round-Up in the South East and South West

expected it was difficult General Election night for British National Party candidates across the South of England.

However, against the odds, there were some encouraging results which hold out distinct promise for the future.

Andrew Moffat standing in Bognor Regis, the first time the BNP has contested the seat, achieved 4% which was the highest percentage in the South East. Richard Trower scored a respectable 3.5% in Crawley and managed to beat UKIP and the Greens in the process.

In the South West it was Bristol that topped the list with Brian Jenkins and Colin Chidsey polling 4.4% and 3.6% in the city's East and South constituencies.

Results Round-Up for Wales and Scotland

FROM contesting just two parliamentary seats in Wales at the General Election in 2005, this time around it was 19.

This was reflected in our vote increasing from 1,689 in 2005 to 23,088.

In the jostling for position amongst the three 'minor' parties in Wales, wherever the BNP stood we conclusively beat UKIP and the Greens. Also significant is the fact that we beat Plaid Cymru in two seats and are breathing down their necks in several more. In Scotland, the British National Party increased its vote yet again easily beating UKIP and the Greens.

In Glasgow, BNP candidates contesting seven of the eight seats received 4,564 votes. This was up from 2007 when contesting a full slate, British National Party candidates polled 3,865 votes.

Our best result in Scotland was 1,010 votes for Richard Payne, standing for the first time in Banff and Buchan.

60 seats in the WELSH ASSEMBLY are up for election on May 5th 2011.

Politics can be a hard game

Your vote goes up . . . your opponents say you are a hard-working councillor . . . yet you still lose your seat!

ABOVE: Chris Beverley and wife Joanna, campaigning in Morley and at a hustings in the town centre where he shared a platform with Labour leadership contender Ed Balls.

CHRIS BEVERLEY was one of the victims of Thursday 6th May.

For the past four years he has been a Leeds City councillor, representing the voters of Morley South, and during that time he has never missed a council meeting. He had a 100% attendance record.

His opponents acknowledge that he is a hard-working councillor and even anti-BNP national newspaper The Guardian had to admit that Chris "has never put a foot wrong".

The voters of Morley South obviously agree and that's why he polled more votes this time around - 2,246 (21.1%) - than he did when he first won his seat back in 2006.

But politics is a hard game and when there's a swing against your Party, good councillors lose their seats and that's what happened to Chris Beverley.

Surprisingly upbeat and getting accustomed to life outside the council chamber, the Constituency Manager to Andrew Brons MEP, told Freedom that he has already started the campaign to win back his seat.

"We have a big newspaper round in the ward and that has grown during the election period. There have been many enquiries and we are already turning these into new members.

"Make no mistake, Morley South is a BNP ward and it's just out on loan until the next round of elections."

ABOVE: Chris Beverley and wife Joanna, campaigning in Morley and at a hustings in the town centre where he shared a platform with Labour leadership contender Ed Balls.

His opponents acknowledge that he is a hard-working councillor and even anti-BNP national newspaper The Guardian had to admit that Chris "has never put a foot wrong".

The voters of Morley South obviously agree and that's why he polled more votes this time around - 2,246 (21.1%) - than he did when he first won his seat back in 2006.

But politics is a hard game and when there's a swing against your Party, good councillors lose their seats and that's what happened to Chris Beverley.

Surprisingly upbeat and getting accustomed to life outside the council chamber, the Constituency Manager to Andrew Brons MEP, told Freedom that he has already started the campaign to win back his seat.

"We have a big newspaper round in the ward and that has grown during the election period. There have been many enquiries and we are already turning these into new members.

"Make no mistake, Morley South is a BNP ward and it's just out on loan until the next round of elections."

"There was also the miscounting of votes on election night, again not just isolated incidents, and other electoral issues where the British National Party was deliberately discriminated against. There are a number of investigations under way, the outcomes of which I shall report as soon as they are known."

Despite some disappointing results, Paul says that the overall campaign has been a success.

PAULMORRIS, the new Regional Organiser for the Eastern region has praised his local activists for their work during the elections.

In a letter to members he said:

"Our General Election campaign was fought by a dedicated team of nationalists who refused to be distracted from their campaigning by a series of disgraceful smears manufactured for the media by our opponents. Despite this, in many places in the region the British National Party has moved into fourth place, which puts us in good stead for the future."

It was certainly a high profile campaign with Paul and his team attending many of the hustings around the region where the BNP candidates proved to be the main attraction. They certainly held their own and challenged the representatives of the other parties on their policies and commitment to the British people.

Steve McCole in Broxbourne and Danny Seabrook in Hertsmere were particularly effective, impressing the audience by getting their policies across in an interesting and articulate manner.

However, Paul Morris acknowledges that there are a number of issues that have raised concerns and need to be addressed.

"The non-delivery of election addresses by the Royal Mail was on a serious scale," he told Freedom.

"There was also the miscounting of votes on election night, again not just isolated incidents, and other electoral issues where the British National Party was deliberately discriminated against. There are a number of investigations under way, the outcomes of which I shall report as soon as they are known."

Despite some disappointing results, Paul says that the overall campaign has been a success.

"The region stood more candidates than it has ever done before and because of this we have seen a record number of enquiries coming in for membership. We also have received many messages of support from people who are sympathetic to our policies and have pledged to vote for us in the future."

HERTSMERE: Danny Seabrook and his supporters after an excellent hustings.

Local Elections Results Round-Up

EIGHT YEARS of continual progress in local elections had to come to an end sooner or later.

The three main parties seem to have their setbacks almost every other year, so for the British National Party to have its first since 2002 is no mean achievement. That provides scant comfort for our 720 tenacious candidates who on Thursday May 6th contested 701 council seats.

We lost some good councillors and the communities they served will be the poorer for it. In many cases the number of votes for the BNP went up, but this couldn't save them against Labour's incredible election machine which helped mobilise a record turnout. It means that in Barking & Dagenham there is now no voice for the British people. Labour's ethnic cleansing of the borough from traditional British to immigrant majority can now continue apace without any opposition in the council chamber.

Only a fraction of the results are reproduced here under 'Votes of Note' but the important information is in the blue blocks. These are the councils where British National Party candidates were standing and every BNP unit that campaigned hard for their representatives should feel proud of their efforts.

N what was a difficult Unight for all the British National Party's local election candidates, two of our sitting councillors did manage to survive the opposition onslaught and hold on to their council seats.

In Bradford, Paul Cromie was up against a huge Conservative Party 'no expense spared' campaign as well as a spoiling candidate from the Establishment's Safety Valve Party, UKIP.

When the votes were counted in the Queensbury Ward, Paul had held on to his seat with a majority of just 15 votes.

No apologies for ten pages of election results

A statement from stand-in Freedom editor Martin Wingfield

BRITISH National Party candidates are heroes. Whether standing in the General Election or in local council elections, BNP candidates show immense courage because they know that they will be targeted by our opponents and will not get fair or equal treatment in the media.

But giving over half of this 20-page newspaper to publishing the BNP results is not just about showing our appreciation of these brave British National Party representatives.

The General Election results are printed in full because they are significant. Despite the hostile media coverage and interference in the electoral process by our enemies, the British National Party has, against the odds, established itself as Britain's 4th political party. This achievement is recognised in the pages of this special issue of Freedom.

BNP official elected vice-chairman of his local council

THE British National Party's Councillors' Liaison Officer, James North, has been reappointed vice-chairman of his local council at its latest meeting.

"This is the second time I've been elected vice-chairman of the council by a unanimous vote," James told Freedom.

"I'm very happy they have put their trust in me for another year in this important role."

JAMES NORTH: Important role.

He was also appointed to the Personnel Working Party, Risk Management Party, Finance Working Party, Wind Farm Working Party, and is one of the council's representatives on the Leicestershire and Rutland association of local councils.

Just a few weeks ago James was asked to give the opening speech on behalf of the council.

PLANNING MEETING: Branch officials discuss campaign strategy for next May's local council elections.

New printing centre for North West Region

THE British National Party's North West Regional Council meeting held in Leigh at the end of May focussed on a programme of activities for the summer.

"It was a very upbeat meeting which saw the first appearances from many new officials and newly formed groups including South Manchester, Bolton and Stockport," reported Regional Organiser Clive Jefferson.

The new appointments included: James Clayton, the current Blackpool organiser, as Deputy North West Regional Organiser. Paul Stafford, the current Allerdale organiser, as the Development

JAMES CLAYTON: The new deputy RO.

Officer for Carlisle & Cumbria.

Derek Adams as Regional

Press Officer and Kevin Clark as the region's Enquiries and Membership secretary.

Dr Charles Mather and Mike Lester announced that funding was now in place for a new regional printing centre which will provide a service for the BNP's 15 branches in the south of the region.

"It is a sign of great depth and political maturity that everyone who attended the meeting did not want to rest or stand still, but were determined to drive forward.

"We intend to be first out of the starting blocks and our units are already preparing their campaigns for next year's elections," Clive Jefferson told Freedom.

Durham BNP's Community Path Project

LOCAL BNP members in County Durham have constructed a path through woods near the Cow Plantation in Spennymoor as a community project.

The path was needed to aid the public who use the woods for walking or cycling because the existing access was dangerous.

Leading the project was County Durham BNP Organiser, Adam Walker, who was impressed with the work by his team.

"I've been planning this project for a while, but it had to be put on hold until after the General Election," Mr Walker said.

"It took the team two hours to finish the path and we have used all natural materials from the woods itself, so it is very eco friendly," he added.

The local members who took part in the project were Adam Walker, Amanda Foster, Pete Molloy, Michael Stewart and Mark Walker.

JOIN PEOPLE LIKE YOU IN THE BNP

This is the real face of the British National Party, a family organisation that wants to pu British people first. The BNP doesn't hate' anyone, we just want to make sure that our own people aren't turned into second class citizens. The British National Party doesn't blame immigrants either—we blame the politicians who have let this country down.

Just a few weeks ago James was asked to give the opening speech on behalf of the council at the opening of some new play equipment at a local park.

He told an audience of around 70 local residents:

"It's a great honour to be asked to speak on behalf of the council at such an important event; the whole council has worked tirelessly to secure the funding for this scheme and it's fantastic to see it finally completed."

The park was then formally opened and free ice cream provided for the children enjoying the new facilities.

THE British National Party is going to redouble its efforts going to redouble its efforts to save Britain, John Walker, BNP European Parliamentary Assistant, Radio RWB coordinator and guest speaker, told the May meeting of the Bracknell & Wokingham branch of the British National Party.

"The BNP's share of the vote improved compared to the number of seats we contested," he said.

"We didn't win any seats because we were on the receiving end of a huge turnout of discontented voters all trying to remove the Labour Party from power."

"We must respond by modernising the Party further and becoming more professional. We must ensure that we learn from what the three main parties have achieved and that is getting out our postal voters."

Mark Burke, the Bracknell & Wokingham Organiser, spoke about the local campaign.

"It is the first time we have stood in Bracknell Forest and we achieved a satisfactory result," he said.

"We are now fully on the political map here and must prepare for the Bracknell Forest borough council elections next year when we will be standing in as many seats as possible".
